Matriculation Pass-rate in Rakhine State (2002-12)

Measuring the education sector as a key indicator for the development of Myanmar, matriculation pass-rate of Rakhine State shows a decline from 26% (in 2002) to 24% (in 2012) since the entire country's pass-rate also decreased. But in 2004-05, that rate of the State reaches its peak which surmounted the entire country's matriculation pass-rate. The State remains the second lowest one in a couple of years at the end of the study period (2011 and 2012) with a dramatic increase in unemployment rate which reached its highest in 2010 since 2005 that started being higher in the region.
