With more than half of the world's population settled within metropolitan areas, the growing importance of cities has created new opportunities for city leaders to participate in world affairs and influence global issues.

As a result, large cities are becoming an essential component in the "bottom-up" formulation of global policies on issues such as environmental sustainability, economic growth, social equity, and quality of life. The following distinguished panelists will discuss how their cities are addressing these critical challenges.

The Honorable M.R.
Sukhumbhand
Paribatra,
Governor of Bangkok

The Honorable
Tang Jie,
Vice Mayor of Shenzhen

The Honorable
Mufi Hannemann,
Mayor of Honolulu

The Honorable
Fauzi Bowo,
Governor of Jakarta

The Honorable
Lin Chien-yuan,
Deputy Mayor of
Taipei
