* RENEWING THE PACIFIC PARTNERSHIP, by Charles E. Morrison and Peter A. Petri with responses by Taeho Bark, Peter Drysdale, and Shen Dingli. East-West Dialogue, No. 1. September 2007.

Introducing a new East-West Center series . . .

East-West Dialogue, a project of the East-West Center, fosters discussion and debate of key issues in Asia-U.S. economic relations. The Dialogue seeks to develop and promote innovative policy, business, and civic initiatives to enhance this critical partnership. Peter A. Petri, Senior Fellow of the East-West Center and the Carl Shapiro Professor and former Dean of the Brandeis International Business School, is the convener of the Dialogue. This publication is produced with the support of the East-West Center Research Program and Publications Office. We welcome ideas for future issues and projects.

The print publication is intended to be complementary to the interactive, online version of the East-West Dialogue. To participate in this discussion and read comments from others, visit <http://forum.eastwestcenter.org/eastwestdialogue/>.

RENEWING THE PACIFIC PARTNERSHIP, by Charles E. Morrison and Peter A. Petri with responses by Taeho Bark, Peter Drysdale, and Shen Dingli. East-West Dialogue, No. 1. Honolulu: East-West Center, September 2007. 12 pp. Paper, single copies available on a complimentary basis. Also available online at <http://www.EastWestCenter.org/pubs/2209>.

In this inaugural issue of East-West Dialogue, Charles E. Morrison and Peter A. Petri argue that the chemistry of Asia-U.S. relations is failing and suggest strengthening regional institutions and public diplomacy to invigorate it. Commentaries by Taeho Bark (South Korea), Peter Drysdale (Australia), and Shen Dingli (China) support the importance of a partnership, but see different priorities for it.
