"Contemporary South Asia"
Dr. Satu Limaye

This seminar will focus on the South Asia region's contemporary characteristics, the role and interests of the United States in this region, the prospects for regional cooperation, and the implications of South Asian developments for the wider Asia-Pacific region. The main argument is that the nexus between South Asia, the U.S. and the wider Asia-Pacific is growing, and therefore there needs to be more understanding of developments in the region. This presentation is the first of two seminars on the South Asia region.

In February 2007, Dr. Satu Limaye was named Director of the East-West Center in Washington D.C. Prior to this appointment, he has worked with the Institute for Defense Analyses (IDA) as a research member and was previously director of the Asia-Pacific Center for Security Studies research and publications division. Dr. Limaye graduated from Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service and went on to receive his Ph.D. in international relations from Oxford University where he was a Marshall Scholar. He has written several publications on International Relations in the Asia-Pacific, including US-Australia and Japan and the New Security Triangle, The Asia-Pacific and the United States 2004-2005, and Asia’s Bilateral Relations.
