

Peter P. Jennings

1990s Alumnus

Peter Jennings (ISI 1963-67) lived a colorful, adventurous life. His BA at Dartmouth and MA at UH/EWC were in geography, but his first love was volcanology and he visited active volcanoes frequently. He loved the outdoors and wanted to protect our natural environment. He loved sailing, kayaking, hiking, camping, golfing and scuba diving. He trekked to the Mt. Everest base camp and in the 1960s parachuted into Irian Jaya with the United Nations during the Act of Free Choice. His friends remember him for his love of people, his generous spirit, and his support of students at UH and EWC.
