

12,000+ people reached through seminars, public events and arts outreach.

Public Engagement

The East-West Center connects its resources and research with the local, national and international community through news media and public information services; briefings for visiting officials; and public programs. In 2015, hundreds of people attended public seminars in Honolulu and Washington, D.C., as well as a broad range of meetings and conferences throughout the U.S. and Asia Pacific region. The Washington-based Asia Matters for America project continued to upgrade its user-friendly public data products on a wide variety of U.S.-Asia interactions. And more than 10,000 Hawai'i students and community members experienced EWC Arts Program exhibitions and performances, including concerts, school tours and school workshops like the school demonstration shown here by a member of the Music of the Himalayas troupe. ♦ Arts.EastWestCenter.org
